

Baró Gallery Jardins presents the exhibition "Expanding Universe" signed by Maria Nepomuceno

Nature and strong Brazilian cultural references of the artist are translated into five new works in which the colors stand out

São Paulo, October 2015 - The Baró Gallery presents on November 14th, Saturday, starting 4:00pm, the opening of the exhibition "Expanding Universe", signed by the artist Maria Nepomuceno. The exhibition remains on display until December 19th, in the address Consolação Street, 3417 - Jardins. In "Expanding Universe", the artist shows a step in the research she has experienced a few years ago, where the relations with time, origin, nature, manufacturing, architecture, symbolic objects and everyday materials, are narrowed in each work.

There are five new works where the color has a special attention. "Color is a subject that has always interested me, a heritage of the start of my artistic activity while studying painting. In these sculptures, the passages from one color to another are given by the sequence in which the bead is the minimum unit" said Nepomuceno.

In her work, the beads are more than dots of color in the works, they are also reference to indigenous and african roots. The works that Maria Nepomuceno features are the exercise of this mathematical construction of colors and movement applied to living matter. Her inspiration comes from plants, fruits, organs and planets incorporated by materials such as straw, clay, wood, ceramics, necklace beads, ropes and pigment.
